predict that it will be still better filled this evening, for such an enthusiastic and unanimous verdict of approval has seldom been given on any entertainment as was rendered on "Pop," as presented by the Rice Surprise Party. This party justified its title to its name by agreeably surprising all present, abelt they were prepared for a pleaning programme. The place his no plot, and pretends to none; its aim is to amuse and entertain for an evening, and it did-it with rare success last night. The company is even and selected with unusual skill, each member fitting his part as if the part had been made for him. Mr. Fitzgerald is immense as a comedian, Mr. James H. Stuart a whole show in himself with his marvelous bars voice and educated feet, and all the ladies are both attractive in person and pleasing-attaics. The specially olfo and operatio potpourir caught the house as a Wheeling house is seldom taken. The "Dudges," as personated by Misecs Belle Nicholson, Florence Kelloge, Louis's Dampsay and Molile Fuller, were as special bit, while demure Miss Dempsey's "For Goodness Sake, don't say I told You?" was encored again and sping and dance were both fine, the latter suggesting that Minnie Palmer had bester come back from England and look to her latarels. ### A PENSION FRAUD

WHO SWINDLED WHEELING PEOPLE

nd is now E-joying his lil-gotten Galus in Security In Some More Peaceful Clime-A Neat Trap to Catch Him Falls to Work-file Petty but Profitable Operations.

Esveral weeks ago there arrived in Wheel ing a middle aged, professional looking man, short and heavy set, and with the appear-unce of a man well to do in the world but loo busy to be acrupulous about his personal appearance. He took rooms at Miss White's, where he represented himself as Dr. Daverport, special agent and medical examiner of the Pension Department at Washington. He remained at Mrs. White's until his businers grew to such proportions that the rush of callers to his rooms became an annoyance to Miss White and her other lodgers, and she requested him to seek other quarters. This he did, and after about a week' again moved, having his critical point in the city at three or four different places. He recently left two, and sfort several days had elapsed and he did not return nor send word to any of those with whom he had business, there began to dawn on their minds where he represented himself as Dr. Davenbegan to dawn on their mind

This idea was that "Doctor Davenport" was rank impostor. And so far, though be has been gone just a week to-day, they have re-ceived no information which leads them to been gone just a week to-day, they have received no information which leads them to suppose that their suspicions did the smoothtongical Doctor an injustice.

The stranger was not long in getting the names of persons who had applied for pensions or for an increase in the amount; they were already receiving an persons from the Government. He called upon these parties and represented himself as a special agent aent out to invastigate their cross, and after a few inquilicesexpressed the opinion that the claims was a just one. In some crees he claimed to unite with his office of special agent that of medical examiner, and made examinations in his mander, for which he charged and received a fee of 35. In other cases he informed the applicant that the claim would be favorably reported, but that such was the rush of cases that it might posably be some length of time before their money could be received. For a fee of $10, in advance, the special claim could be expedited, however. This he generally got.

A TARP LAID.

A TRAP LAID. After Davenport had been operating here or some time Squire H. T. Peterman heard if his manner of doing businers, and contrained that the fellow was a frand, he laid a rap for him. He made an engagement to neet the Doctor lest Thursday, with the censible view of having an examination of inner imade with a view to making application for a pension. The wary swindler was himself made with a view to making application for a pension. The wary swindler was not so eavily caught. He was too old at the business to fall into so plain a pit. Thursday came, but Dr. Davenport did not.
About the rime time Capt. Cowan, of the Postofilee, heard of Davenport, through a widow living on the Island whom the swindier had victimized, and the Captain allo washes a resusception to meet him on Thurs-nade an arrangement to meet him on Thursday forenoon. Thursday morning he lef day forencon. Thursday morning he left word that he was obliged to go to Benwood on business, but would return in the evening. He has not been head of here since. In one case a widow lady who had been warned not to give the man any money or deceived by his oily tangue and plausible explanations that she paid him $5 on account. He has not yet called for the remaining talf of his fee.

The man was evidently an experienced sharper. He cautioned some of his victims not to mention his presence in the city, as there were some fraudulent operations which he wished to investigate, and if his visit and business became generally known he would not be able to work to advantage. This excuss was taken; hence the privacy with which he was enabled to operate.

If the stagment of a vonny lady at Mix.

which he was exem; nence the privacy with which he was enabled to operate.

If the statement of a young lady at Mir White's, made to a reporter last evening is not exaggerated, the man must have found this field white for the tarvest. She says there was a continust rash of visitors 12 the Doctor's room, and since his departure many have called to icquire after him, saying that they had paid him fees, and in many cast extrasted discharges or other invaluable documents to his keeping. This robbery of confiding people of property which is of no value 12 him, and leaves them without evidence of the justice of their claims to pensions, makes his work pirticularly atronous. Many of his victims, too, were poor widows, whose husbands had given that lives for that. country. Such villainy deserves the severes sensity of the law, but so far as could be earned no sters have been taken to appre-send and punish Davenport.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK

TIMELY IMPROVEMENTS THERE

Other Matters of Interest in the State at Large-Big Skull Found at Parkers-From a gentleman who recently visite ountain Lake Park and spent considerable time there, an Intelligences reporter yester day gathered the following interesting points about this destined to be famous resort, situated on top of the Alleghanies-West Virginia enterprise located in another State. Winter's near sporcach, heralded by state. Winter's near sporcach, heraided by quite a heavy snow storm, a few days since, warned the few remaining residents at the Park that it was time to leave, and the place now is deserted away by those who are compelled to remain during the winter. The autumn has been spent in husly pushing the various improvements, principally the drives, and now as one ilsebes by on the B. & O. he can see from his window walks, streets and broad avenues numerous enough for a city, while the cottages extending along the front for about a mile and those farther for a city, while the cottages extending along the front for about a mile and those farther back that lie dotted over the entire place present an appearance of attactiveness which surprises the stranger who has an idea that the place is a wilderness and almost restoniahes those who have watched the Park spring up. "The rapid growth of the place has been phenomenal," said the gentleman. Continuing he said: "Already it's acknowledged that in its second season Mountain Lake Park has outgrown both Deer eark and Oakland in point of numbers as regards both visitors and summer residents. In regard to its rank as a resort of the highest order, all one need do is to glance at the hotel register to see that no better names are to be found one need do is to glance at the hotel register to see that no better names are to be found than these of our own citizens who visited there during the season."

The association is not the only body that has been actively engaged in making improvements. Individuals have been building handrome cottages and the B. & O. rc. a., realizing the value of a recort of this nature to its interests, has been and is lending hearly aid and co-poperation. It is proposed to enlarge the hotel before next sesson. In fact this is an imperative necessity, as such a large number have expressed their determination to spend next summer there. The question of amusements and entertainments is also being discursed, and it is anticipated that not only the programme of religious, literary and scientific exercises will be enlarged and improved, but also, that other means of erjoyment will be added to render the place as attractive as possible.
